Question from Caroline Wright regarding telemedicine.

1. For a doctor that is physically in a different state (for example, California) but providing health services via telemedicine (for example, a psychiatrist skyping to consult a patient there in Georgia do you require the doctor to hold just an Georgia license or a Georgia and California Medical license?

2. Vice-versa, for a doctor physically in Georgia but providing care to a patient in California (no patients in Georgia) do you require them to have a license in Arkansas in addition to California?

The Board advised to check with the California Board of Medicine on their laws and rules regarding this matter. Also advised that Georgia would require the physician that practices in Georgia to have a license.
